LYNCHEURG AND DANVILLE RAILROAD -BALTIMORE INTERVIEWED. -- We referred, some days since, to the fact that a committee of the directors of the Lynchburg and Danville Railroad Company were in Butimore last week, for consultation as to the, best plan of interesting Baltimare and the council in that enterprise. A communication in the Lynchburg Virginian gives the following account of the movements of the committee and the expectations which they cherish in the matter:

The mombers of the Council in the city were favorably impressed with our scheme, and gave us every assurance personally that we could desire. The only apprehension which they suggested was from the very recent and large approprintions which the city had made, amounting to some six or seven millions of dollars, and formed her citizens were not just now in condition to make further expenditures, though they fully concurred with us that the profits anually to the city of Brimers upon the completion of our road would be more than equaled by the

-ubscription asked for. To relieve the council of any apprehension as to the wishes of the citizens, we thought it quiries from the country. best to put some canvassers in the field, who have already entered upon the work, and from the progress reported and the favor manifested by the large property holders and leading mer

We next addressed ourselves to Mr. Garrett, president of the Baltimore and Ohio road, who promptly gave us an audience. It was unnecessary to have approached aim upon the subject. He had fully appreciated the advantage which would result to the city of Baltimore by filling up a gap of only sixty three miles to complete her southern connections, and at the last meeting of the stockholders of his company had expressed his views upon them, and urged the necessity of this connection as tending more to the development of the city than any project then suggested. Apart from getting his councel and advise, we have the assurance of material aid.

GOOD WORDS TO LADIES .- The subject of clothing is understood well enough and the rules of common sense are well enough observed by men. Bu woman is under the guidance of a higher law than any relating to her incividual safety. No woman that is a woman values her comfort, her health, her life, in comparison with her personal appearance. She is impeiled by a protound logic-say rath ra divine in stinet. On the sender thread of her personal attractions hangs the very xistence of a human lurure The crinkle of a ringler, the tie of a ribbon, has swayed the wavering choice of a he f namor-d swain, and given to the word a rac- which would never have a me to the light of day but for the pinch of the curing tongs or a turn of the minner's fingers. It is in virtu of the supreme indiffere ce to consquences, this sublime contempt of disease and death, as compared with the loss of the small st personal advantage-that we man has at ained the power of resistance to exposure which so astonishes the male sex. Think of her thin shoes and stockings, her bare or searcely protected neck or arms, her rose leaf bonner, by the side of the woollen socks, the lavers of flan nei and broadcloth, and the warm hats and cars of her effeminate companion! We may learn a lesson in the matter of clothing from the trainers and jockeys. They masket their horses executive after exercise. We come in heated and throw off our outside clothing. We dress for Summer, and the next thing down goes the thermometer, and we run a risk to which the owner of a race horse would not subjeet his beast.

OUR TEXTILE FABRICS. - A correspondence between Gen. Capron, Commissioner of Agri-culture, and Gen. Morgan, member of Congress from Ohio, indicates an astonishing mercase in the demand for textile labries within ten years past, and shows how a little Government aid, as in the case of $9,500, spent by the flax commission, under the direction of the Department of Agriculture, a few years ago, facilitated the manufacture of fiber which was formerly thrown away, and increased the amount of lint in Ohio thirteen hundred per cent., although the increase of flax-growing, as shown by the production of seed, has been searcely two hun-

Commissioner Capron is alive upon the sub ject of fibers, and is introducing several new varieties, which promise to be of great value. Editors and paper makers will be glad to know that he has procured in Spain, through an agent in Paris, some seed of the Esparto grass, which fiber now constitutes more than two thirds of the British imports of paper stock, or about 70,000 tons per annum. It is believed by many in this country, and by Americans in Spain, that it will flourish on the sunny
